

Why The Environment is important

If we didn't have the environment we wouldn't have anything and living things would die. That's why we should not cut down trees and we must look after the air, food and water.

Humans should not chop trees and should not kill plants, or we will have not enough air. Air is important because it keeps wild animals, plants and people alive.

Food and water is important because if we didn't have food and water we would be hungry and thirsty. Humans should keep the water clean and not throw food out. Food and water is precious, so don't waste it.

To conclude, the environment is important because it gives humans, plants and ^{wild} animals what is needed to survive.

By: Laurel in Year E14 class Lihir International School.