Tiana Yee

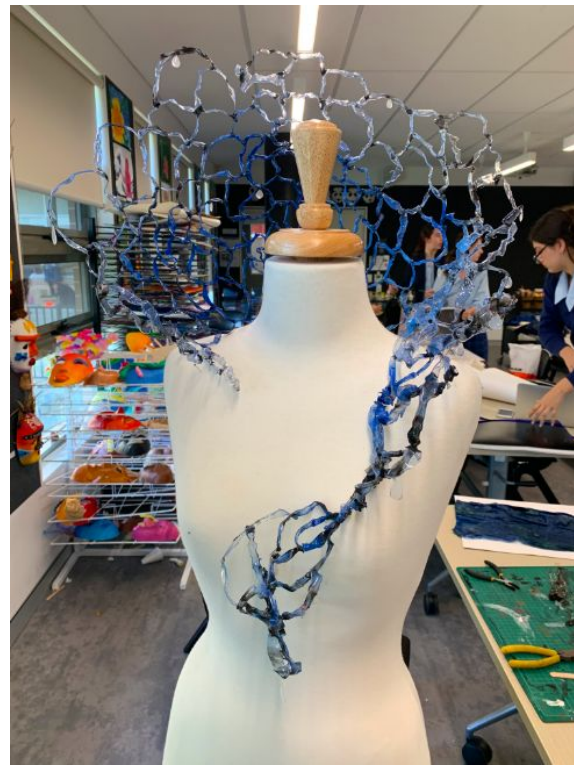

“The Plastic Truth”

Tiana’s wearable aims to embody the features and the issues involved with the ocean. In recent years, plastic pollution within the water has become an extreme threat, yet many people are not aware of it, or will not take action. Every year, 8 million tons of plastic fill the water, endangering animals and landforms. Additionally, plastic is a durable material that is capable of constricting animals and causing lethal harm. Through Tiana’s artwork, she aims to gain awareness and concern towards plastic pollution, in hopes of improving our Earth’s worsening condition.

Elle Colatosti

Elle Colatosti

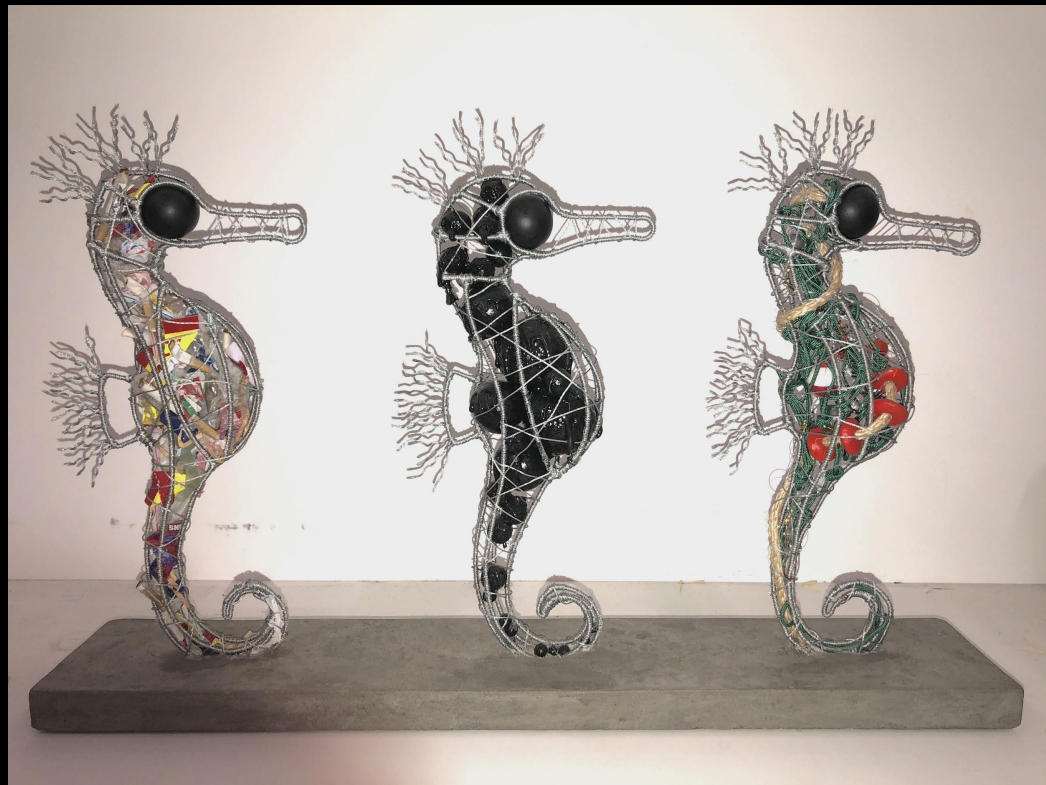

Nature is our sacred art.

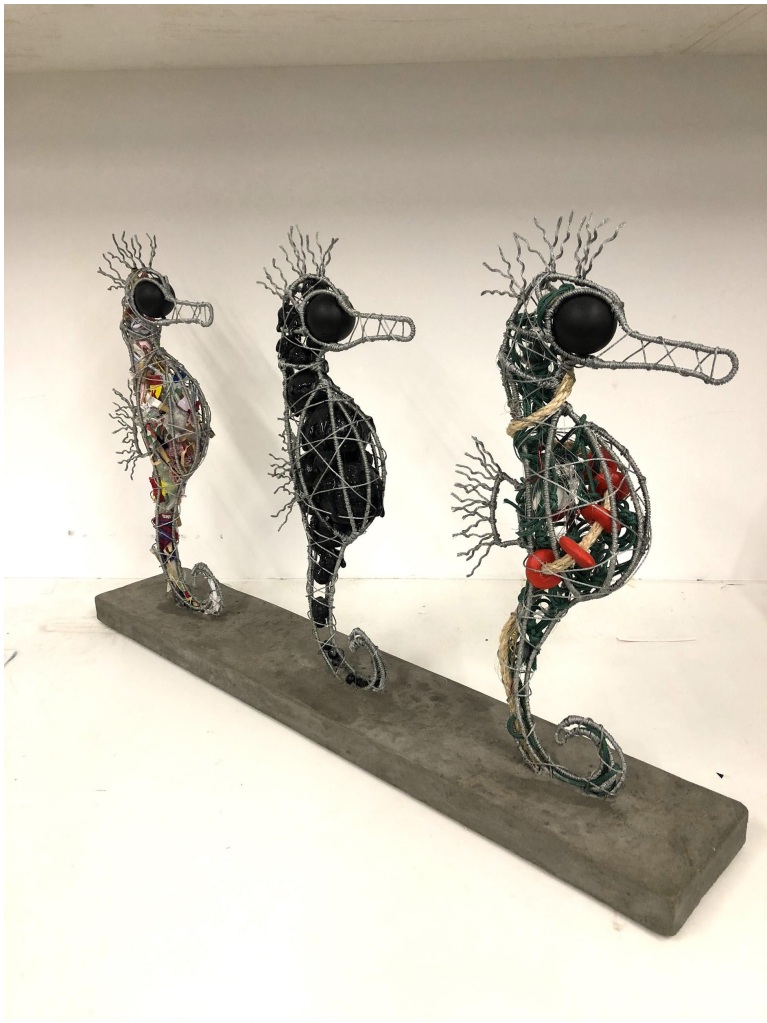

Elle's recycled wearable, a flora and fauna inspired dress, has been designed to portray the natural environment and how human waste impacts flora and fauna. She has done this by using multiple gradients and materials such as cans, plastic bags, paper and so on. This allows people to see the reality of human impact on the natural environment, raising awareness about climate change and pollution.
